1. A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on August 12, 2008 has been entered.
2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 1-10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Wilhoit in view of Millis et al as set forth in paragraph no. 6, Paper No. 20071115.
4. Applicant's arguments filed August 12, 2008 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicant's contention, that Millis et al does not disclose the use of hop beta acids "alone" to inhibit Listeria in meat, is without merit. Millis et al claims that a solution of hop beta acids is effective in preventing growth of Listeria in packaged, solid food products (claim 6). Millis et al discloses that such solid food products include meats used in hot dogs and sausages (col.3, lines 26-30). Hot dogs and sausages are commonly encased in cellulosic casings which. Upon being heated, the hop beta acids will partially transfer from the meat, encased within the casing, to the interior of the casing itself. Despite applicant's evidence regarding the use of these hop beta acids, it remains obvious to use them in inhibiting or preventing Listeria in meat products.

Although "higher levels" of hop beta acids may be required according to the Larson et al article submitted by applicant, this article would not lead the skilled artisan away from using them in meat products. With this in mind, it then becomes obvious to the skilled artisan to use hop beta acids in place of the bacteriocins in Wilhoit if hop beta acids are more readily available and/or more desirable, especially since each of these agents is a well known Listeria inhibitor. Although there may be differences in their chemical structure and MW, as applicant argues, these features alone do not detract from using the agents interchangeably if each is effective in preventing or inhibiting Listeria in food products such as meat.

5. The remainder of applicant's remarks present assertions regarding cellulosic casings but does not obviate the prima facie case of obviousness established in the rejection of claims 1-10. Finally, applicant's contention in the last paragraph on page 8 of the remarks, that a useful antimicrobial casing will not necessarily be produced by first applying an antimicrobial agent to a food product and then encasing the food product, is based upon mere conclusion unsupported by any factual evidence of record.

6. All claims are drawn to the same invention claimed in the application prior to the entry of the submission under 37 CFR 1.114 and could have been finally rejected on the grounds and art of record in the next Office action if they had been entered in the application prior to entry under 37 CFR 1.114. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL even though it is a first action after the filing of a request for continued examination and the submission under 37 CFR 1.114. See MPEP § 706.07(b). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
